DENIT HONORS CONTRACT

Honors Contract Description:

NOTE: The following description is intended as a general guideline. All proposals should be decided by both the Denit Honors student and the course instructor.

The Honors Contract must involve some additional work by the student, but the instructor should guarantee that the total amount of work expected for a course remains closely correlated with the credit hours granted for the course.

Honors Contract work should be qualitatively different from what is expected from other students and must be in addition to the assignments outlined on the course syllabus. It should involve greater contact between student and instructor. Such work may take the form of a creative work or research, an additional paper. A student may be asked to present the work to the instructor or to the class. Honors Contract work can allow a student to study a topic in greater depth, in a larger context, or a more detailed level than is usually expected.
