O-1: Briefly describe what is being requested:

We propose to add to the course catalog a 0-credit writing lab, WRIT 300L, Web Writing Lab.

O-2: Set forth the rationale for the proposal:

This lab was actually part of the original proposal for WRIT 300. Implementation selected in PeopleSoft requires that the laboratory be a separate course in the catalog because the laboratory sections are specific to each undergraduate program discipline.

This is taken from the proposal for WRIT 300 [italics are additions; bold is Potthast's emphasis]

In the redesigned course, students will register for heterogeneous face-to-face sections [these may actually also be online] where they will discuss general readings and work on general writing techniques and strategies. In addition, they will meet online in homogeneous, discipline-specific groups to do three things: (1) discuss discipline-specific readings related to those writing principles and assignments; (2) critique each other's drafts; and (3) get feedback from discipline-specific instructors and/or tutors. The course will be staffed by a combination of fulltime and adjunct faculty.

The course resulting from the redesign will provide opportunities for students to read and write in their disciplines within the broader context of a general writing course.
Document P

1. Date Prepared 3/12/08
2. Prepared by Chris Justice; Peggy Potthast
3. Department School of Communications Design
4. Course Number WRIT 300L
5. Course Title Web Writing Lab
6. Credit Hours 0 (zero); all credit is earned within WRIT 300
7. Prerequisites adequate score on placement test; must be taken with WRIT 300
8. Course Purpose (example: general education, laboratory, elective) general education
9. Rationale To attain course objective of writing within the disciplines, this co-requisite laboratory course is needed.
10. Catalog Description (Paragraph should reflect general aims and nature of the course)

This course is the online lab component of WRIT 300. Students register for the discipline-specific section of WRIT 300L, which matches their degree program. Students read articles and discuss writing related to their majors, complete writing exercises, peer review classmates' writing, and receive instructor feedback about their writing. WRIT 300 and WRIT 300L must be taken concurrently.

13. Learning Goals

By the end of this course taken with its co-requisite WRIT 300, students will demonstrate:

1. Basic writing competencies
   - Demonstrate writing processes that emphasize discovering ideas, planning, drafting, revision, and editing.
   - Explain and demonstrate ways that sentences, words, grammar, and punctuation affect the clarity and meaning of written prose.
   - Use documentation styles (including MLA and APA styles) for quotes, paraphrases, and other found information.

2. Organization
   - Write paragraphs that include main ideas supported by relevant details, evidence, examples, and transitions.
   - Write organized compositions that address different audience’s needs.

3. Complex thinking
   - Analyze complex ideas competently.
     i. Summarize, synthesize, and report information.
     ii. Discuss and analyze cause and effect
     iii. Argue a point effectively.

14. Assessment Strategies

All sections will be assessed using a pre-and post-test instrument. The quality of those writing responses will be determined by measuring them against the course's learning objectives.

15. Text(s) and Materials (example: textbooks, calculator)
   a. The Myths of Innovation by Scott Berkun (required)
   b. The Little, Brown Handbook (LBH), 10th edition, by H. Ramsey Fowler and Jane Aaron (required)

16. Lab Fees none
